MANDATE FOR A CHANGE!

The American people most obviously used the MacArthur episode as a means of doing something not otherwise possible — as a means of punishing President Truman and of serving notice that they expect a change in national affairs and his conduct in office.

Unless the President and his Party leaders intend to comply with this mandate, they ought to change the name of the Democratic Party, because the word "democracy" means "the people rule," and in this present instance, the people have spoken with an unmistakable voice.

What the people want in the way of a change is clear, even though the method of this protest and rebuke did not permit all the public's wishes to be spelled out in the final details.

To begin with, they want more dignity and discretion in the office of President. They want the sort of integrity that doesn't blow hot today and cold tomorrow. They want government by cold, considered judgment; not by impulse, hunch and fit of anger. They want the rats chased out of the Federal government, and they want men of experience and brains to advise the President, not "cronies" with axes to grind.

In national affairs, they want moderation in financial matters—they want some thought given to the future just as well as to the present. They want inflation controlled, regardless of the cost; for they know that inflation will destroy the nation just as thoroughly, and perhaps even more certainly, than defeat in war.

They want a defense policy which makes sense—one in which the program is laid down for the benefit, not of factions and favorites, but for the whole American people. They are willing to tighten their belts, if necessary; but if there is to be sacrifice, they believe there should be equality in it. They want to know that every defense dollar buys a dollar's worth of defense—not a dime's worth of defense and ninety cents in political gravy. They want to know that every American boy whose life is lost or who is permanently maimed in the conflicts now going on or lying ahead get the best possible break while in action, and that what he was fighting for was something worth while—not just to win a political argument.

In foreign affairs, the American people have been kidded long enough. They have been promised miracles ever since the present chief executive came into office, and they have watched their chances for world peace and security steadily dwindling. Judged by results, the Truman foreign policy has been a colossal, monumental failure.

In view of that tragic fact, the American people cannot understand why every man who comes forward with a suggestion for modifying that ill-fated foreign policy should be insulted and assailed, penalized and, where

State Police Say . . .

You bicycle riders don't want to get hurt or to damage that good old bike—of course not. Maybe you just don't give your safety much thought when you're speeding and stuntin', weaving through traffic or hitching onto a truck, carrying passengers, riding without lights at night, or making sudden stops. These practices are the causes of many tragic accidents. Give your safety a little thought. It wouldn't be either smart or thrilling to be laid up in a hospital. Would it?

Mandate For A Change!

possible, as in the MacArthur case, hounded from official position.

If this country had some of the provisions of the governments in (for example) England and France, President Truman would have been out of office long ago, under the pressure of the vast public repudiation of his policies. If history had been different in our own land, and if the impeachment processes had not come to grief in the stresses of Civil War reconstruction, then we might have an orderly and practical means available for removing a President who gets out of step with Congress and the American people.

But those conditions do not exist. The American people have, in most cases, only one opportunity every four years to say their piece about the Presidency in language which can't be disregarded. In between, a president can be and sometimes is a virtual dictator.

The slender control which the public has over its chief executive and the fact that no practical means exist for his removal no matter how unsatisfactory his service, form all the more reason why the people should put their final trust in the branch of the Federal government which they CAN control—the national Congress.

In the present case, the public found an extraordinary means for expressing its mandate in language which the President and his Party can't ignore—even if they decide to defy it.

That such an extraordinary method was seized upon by the American people is evidence that the crisis into which our nation has drifted is itself extraordinary and unprecedented.

The canals are to connect the Baltic, by lakes and rivers, down Volga and the Don rivers, with both the Caspian and the Black seas. The reds boast Moscow will be a port for five seas. Approximately 26,000 miles of riverways are involved. Russia is ice-bound for many months each year, and summer drouths often make rivers unusable. But the reds are working on huge reservoirs which they hope will, in six years, provide a constant flow of water for rivers.

St. John 17:24: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which Thou hast given me; for Thou lovest me before the foundation of the world."

Eternal Father, we know that Thy Son Jesus Christ has gone to prepare a place for us, that where He is, there we might be also. Grant we pray Thee, that we may sincerely pray, as He prayed, that we might be with Him where He is, and that we might behold His glory in the eternal Kingdom; for we know Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. Amen.

pictures of several people, while talking of nutritional foods for a healthier life. Mrs. Norma Carson, chief of women police office, Philadelphia, gave an interesting talk. She told how the police work, how they try to help young girls. She stated that sometimes the children can't help but grow up bad, because of their home environment. She said that many mothers do not have time to sit down and talk to their teen-age daughters and show them the love and affection deserved. "So the girl just doesn't care what she does." Mrs. Carson said that the police-women's work is a wonderful thing, especially when the girls who are taken in may, in five or six years, visit the women police officers with their husbands or children and thank them for what the police-women have done.

The room award went to Miss Genevieve Smith's fifth and sixth grades. A large number attended, and later enjoyed refreshments.
